

Walnut Valley Sailing Club Update

From the Commodore

The days are getting longer and warmer, which opens up more time to get boats prepped and ready for the water. We are keeping an eye on final the cold snaps and looking at getting the water turned on this weekend. If freezing temperatures are forecast through the next week, it may be postponed for next weekend. The last thing we need right now is broken water lines. Since work parties are a no-go, a few of us will be in the yard working to clear out growing weeds as weather allows. The same will apply for cleaning up the clubhouse.

To address Covid-19 concerns, there will be some simple guidelines to follow as we work through this. We are fortunate that The Wildlife and Parks Department is allowing us to continue to utilize the lake and our club. Having a place to retreat to and still be able to do what we love doing is a stark contrast compared many other areas across the nation. Taking care of each other and the facilities are important now more than ever. The clubhouse and restrooms are open to member use, and there will be sanitation supplies available for use within the clubhouse. We ask that you clean and sanitize areas before and after usage. Members are encouraged to supply their own utensils if using the kitchen to mitigate possible contamination. It is also advised to keep the clubhouse under ten occupants at time. We are currently following CDC guidelines on our approach to handling club usage so these terms may adjust accordingly.

If you, or people you interact with frequently, (family/coworkers) have health concerns, then avoiding the clubhouse altogether is the best option. There will be flyers posted with updates as they become available. If anyone has concerns or input, please feel free to contact me. Thank you all.
